KINGSTON, a city of Ontario, at one time capital of Upper Canada, situated at the outlet of Lake Ontario, 172 miles west of Montreal. Lat. 44° 12' N., lon. 76° 41' W. The city occupies the site of old Fort Frontenac, on the north-east shore of the river, opposite Wolfe Island, having the harbor and shipping in front. The harbor is formed at the mouth of Catarauqui River, which here enters the lake. The west shore is bold, and shipping of any size may lie here in perfect safety. East of the bay the land projects southward, terminating in Point Frederick, or Navy Island, beyond which is Haldimand Cove, a deep basin of water, protected by this point on the west, and Point Henry on the east, and guarded from southerly winds by Wolfe Island in front. Kingston is, after Quebec and Halifax, the strongest fort in the Dominion of Canada. There is a fort on Messessaga Point, and all other accessible points are secured by batteries. There are extensive military works on Navy Point, and on Point Henry is a fortress which completely commands the harbor and town. A long bridge across the Catarauqui Bay connects Kingston with Pittsburg, besides which there are the suburbs of Barriefield, Portsmouth and Williamsville. The city is regularly laid out with streets crossing each other at right angles. It is chiefly built of blue limestone, which underlies the town. The streets are lighted with electric light, and the houses are supplied with water from the bay. Wells of mineral water, composed chiefly of chloride of sodium and calcium, have been obtained in three instances by boring to the depth of 145, 85 and 75 feet respectively. Among the public buildings are the city hall and market, court house and goal, post office and custom house, 19 churches, including St. George's and a Roman Catholic Cathedral, Queen's College, Hotel Dieu, Royal Military College, School of Gunnery, Kingston Ladies' College and Conservatory of Music, General Hospital, House of Industry, the buildings occupied by the several literary and benevolent institutions, and a number of schools. About a mile to the west of the city is the Provincial Penitentiary, a large and massive stone building surrounded by a high and most substantial wall, with towers at the corners. Beyond the Penitentiary is the Rockwood Lunatic Asylum. Kingston contains 6 branch banks, 2 telegraph offices, a number of insurance and assurance agencies, 2 breweries, etc., and has manufactories of iron castings, mill machinery, steam engines, locomotives, leather, soap and candles, boots and shoes, wooden ware, brooms, pianos, etc. Ship and boat building is carried on to a great extent, and vessels for both lake and ocean navigation are built and fitted out complete. The commercial affairs of Kingston are regulated by a Board of Trade. The G.T.R. has an important station in rear of the town; freight and passenger trains run to the harbor. A railway runs from Kingston to Renfrew, distant 104 miles. The Rideau Canal, connecting this port with the Ottawa River, has made it a place of considerable commercial importance. Five newspapers are published. The city is divided into 7 wards, and governed by a mayor and board of aldermen. It returns 1 member to the House of Commons and 1 to the Provincial Legislature. It is the seat of the Sees of the Bishop of Ontario and Archbishop of Kingston, and is a port of entry. Pop., 1844, 6,840; 1861, 13,843; 1872, 12,407; 1891, 19,264; 1901, 17,961.

A settlement was begun here by the French, under De Courcelles, as early as 1672, under the name of Fort Catarauqui, and the fort subsequently received the name of Fort Frontenac in honour of the French count of that name. This fort was afterwards in the possession of the French and the Indians, until it was destroyed by the expedition under Colonel Bradstreet in 1758. In 1762 the place fell into the hands of the British, from whom it received its present name. It was incorporated a city in 1838.
